Ald the farmer by judicious legislation, and the vexed question of the State debt is and no effort on the part of the titlers of the soil unsided by legislation can ever relo-vigorate the fallen dusiness. It is for the General Assembly to enact such laws and adopt such measures as will give a standars to that all-important branch of our coun-3ry's interest. No country has ever flourished without due consideration being given to agriculture by the legislative branch of the government. In all the great common wealths of ancient times agriculture received merited attention. While Rome was being discounted to the merited attention of the merited attention. pushing her victorious legions to the utmost limits of the habitable world her govern-ment at homewas fostering the testes for ag-

And as agriculture is the great going fast, he will invariably take the latter basal industry upon which all other industinuance, it is apparent that weatever legistation is made in behalf of the farmer must result in benefit to every other industry.

Now, I would suggest that the Legislature make an appropriation of an amount

The immediate result of such action on the part of the Legislature would be an in-crease of the staples of the country, and consequently an increase of revenue. The ultimate result would be an increase in the assessed value of land, thereby extinguishing the debt and enriching the State. TOM. GARRIGHT.
